IMPERIAL COLLEGE OPERATIC SOCIETY

THE GONDOLIERS

BY W S GILBERT + A S SULLIVAN

"On the first night of 'The Gondoliers' I was in a whirl. I walked on, took one look at the audience, and gulped. Then I saw Sullivan's face beaming up at me from the conductor's stand, and my confidence returned."

Those words were written by Decima Moore, who made her stage debut in "The Gondoliers", which opened at the Savoy Theatre on 7th December 1889. The opera was the last truly successful collaboration between Gilbert & Sullivan it was an oasis of calculated calm in the midst of the disagreements that clouded their later years. Its style is different to that of the others, because the nature of their relationship was different when they wrote it. Gone is the biting sarcasm and satire which is a prominent feature of much of Gilbert's other work. Gondoliers is a gentle comedy, soft and refined - truly nearer to the style of English musical comedy than to light opera, and it may well be that "The Gondoliers" influenced the subsequent style and development of English musical comedy, more than any other single work.

Gilbert remarked of "The Gondoliers": "It gives one the chance of shining right through the twentieth century with a reflected light." In that he was right, and the popularity of the piece has never waned. Gilbert fussed a great deal over the writing of "The Gondoliers". He Sullivan had just patched up one guarrel and were being almost neurotically careful not to upset or offend each other. The child of their union turned out to be somewhat coddled and somewhat delicate, without the robustness of some of the earlier pieces. Gilbert would submit several versions of various songs and scenes to Sullivan and ask his opinion as to which was best - a thing he would never have done before. Much of the unused material still exists, not only alternative songs, but also extra ones which were subsequently deleted, probably before Sullivan had set them to music. In fact, "The Gondoliers" is an object lesson on how to build a rich musical fabric of graceful melodies around a rather thin and inconsequential plot - the essence of musical comedy.

1

The collaborators were determined to create a play with no star parts and so Gilbert made nearly all the main characters of equal size, even re-writing scenes originally allocated to one character and giving them to another, when he felt that one character had too much and another too little to do. This is good musical comedy, but not necessarily good drama. For instance the scene in which the Duke teaches Marco and Guiseppe to dance a gavotte was originally designed to be a scene in which Don Alhambra was to teach them a minuet. There was on hand to play the Duke a man (Frank Wyatt) who could not sing, but who was a good actor, so Sullivan arranged the music so that it could be spoken in tune, not sung. When the Duke has to sing in concerted numbers, Sullivan structured the music so that the essential harmony is contained in the other parts, and the Duke can be as off-key and as out-of-tune as he likes without doing any serious damage. This is not, of course, to cast any slight on the musical capabilities of the singer playing the Duke in this production; the part can and has been played equally successfully by baritones with fine voices. It may have been the instance of Frank Wyatt which prompted the impressario George Edwards to cast Joseph Coyne, a fine actor who couldn't sing either as Danilo in the first English production of "The Merry Widow". It worked, but when the composer, Lehar found out, he nearly had a heart attack.

In spite of the difference in Gilbert's approach to the writing of "The Gondoliers", he imbued it with all the familiar stock characters, and Sullivan characterised their music appropriately. In his early opera "The Sorceror" there was little difference between the music of the village girl Constance and the young lady Aline. In "The Gondoliers" on the other hand, the simple melodies of Gianetta contrast with the more refined music of Casilda. Don Alhambra has suitably pompour music, the Duchess belligerently furious music, and so on.

MICHAEL WALTERS

THE GONDOLIERS

i.

1

OR

THE KING OF BARATARIA

DRAMATIS PERSONAE

THE DUKE OF PLAZA TO (A Grandee of Spai	ROGER WOODWARD
LUIZ (his Attendant	RICHARD WILSON
DON ALHAMBRA DEL BOL (the Grand Inquist	JOHN BARRATT
MARCO PALMIERI		ROGER NICHOLLS
GIUSEPPE PALMIERI	(Venetian Gondoliers)	TIM JOHNSON
ANTONIO		ELLIS PIKE
FRANCESCO		STEVE BODLE
GIORGIO		MIKE TRIPP
ANNIBALE		JEFF JENKINS
THE DUCHESS OF PLAZA TORO		DEBBIE JOHNSON
CASILDA (her daughter)		SALLY HESLOP
GIANETTA		DELITH BROOK
TESSA	(Contadine)	BETHAN HOWELLS
FIAMETTA		JANE CAPPER
VITTORIA		CATHERINE FETHERSTON
GIULIA		ANNE OTWOROWSKI
INEZ (the King's foster mother)		ALISON CARTER

CHORUS OF GONDOLIERS AND CONTADINE

Ann Alderson Christine Barson Caroline Brodrick Edna Burrow Elizabeth Clark Hilary Coates Sally Donegani Karen Harget

Robert Allport Robert Burden Tim Carter Alan Crewe Graeme Dewart John Dickinson Janina Kaminska Celia Martin Cecilia Nevill Pat Nuttall Alison Steel Barbara Tansey Jane Turner Christine Withers

Gilles-France Dumont Chris Gold Vince Handerek Andy Hoskins Paul Leonard Julian Radowicz

Bernard Tagg

PROGRAMME

The show will be in two acts and six scenes. There will be an interval of approximately 20 minutes between acts. Refreshments will be on sale.

ACT I The Piazza, Venice

ACT II Pavilion in the Palace of Barataria

New members are always welcome to join the Society. Rehearsals are at 7.30 pm every Tuesday evening at 53, Prince's Gate. If you are interested, come along to any rehearsal.

ORCHESTRA

LEADER: David Bogle

VIOLINS

Jane O'Connor Teresa Smith Janet Jordan

Joy Davis Damian Falkowski

VIOLAS

Jon Reed Anthony Ruston

CELLOS

Mike Barnes Alan Lodge

BASS

Lynne Bryan

FLUTES

Virginia Brown Wendy Norman

OBOE

George Brown

CLARINETS

David Johnson Vicky Smith

BASSOONS

Liane Brisley Mark O'Neal

HORNS

Fred Shaub Cecily Woods

TRUMPETS

Wayne Plummer David Burgess

TROMBONES

Richard Fairhead Susan Dodd Roger King

PERCUSSION

Brian Steele

FOR THE COMPANY

Stage Manager Set Designers

Deputy Stage Manager Lighting Designer Properties Assistant Stage Manager Stage Assistants

Wardrobe Mistress Orchestra Arrangers

House Manager House Staff

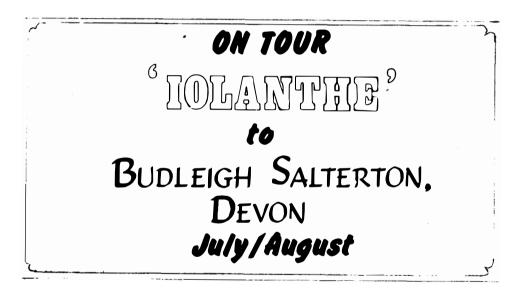

Rehearsal accompanists

Andy Potter Ian Gledhill Andy Potter Liz Christie Bob Holland Ian Lacey Paul Jarvis Steven Bartlett Harvey Cobbold Mary Erskine Bryan Evans Paul Flook Ken Haley Kathy Hamilton Trevor Osborne Neil Pielou Walter Plinge Nigel Stevens Mike Town Ann Alderson David Bogle Christine Barson Dick Stockton Denise Clark Tim Frain Keith McClurey Tony Moorby Pamela Rudge Tony Castro Debbie Johnson Pat Nuttall

The Society extends its thanks to I.C. Dramatic Society for their invaluable help in the staging of this production.

THE COMMITTEE

Chairman Vice-Chairman Secretary Treasurer Publicity Officer Ticket Manager Social Secretary Jeff Jenkins Graeme Dewart Elizabeth Clark Alan Crewe JulianRadowicz Karen Harget Jane Turner

ERRATA

•

The part of Marco is played by Tim Johnson and the part of Giuseppe is played by Roger Nicholls.

The play is in two Acts and six Scenes:

ACT I VENICE

	Scene	1	A Piazza
	Scene	2	The Ducal Palace
	Scene	3	Outside the Church
ACT	II		THE ROYAL PALACE, BARATARIA
	Scene	1	The Garden
	Scene	2	The Ante Room
	Scene	3	The Throne Room