

VENUE 24.

INPHONE.™

British TELECOM

TALK YOURSELF INTO MORE STYLE.

Even after you've had a chance to admire the new Venue 24 in your own home, to examine it and show it off to your friends, the burning question will remain

Can your conversation ever be as stylish?

Because with an Inphone as manifestly sophisticated as the Venue 24, it would seem distinctly incongruous to use it, say, to order a take-away vindaloo. Its radical yet discreet design would certainly be at odds with the calling of a radio phone-in programme. And dialling the speaking clock would hardly be doing the Venue full justice.

INTOUCH.

There again, that's one call you wouldn't have to make. Because amongst the Venue's many advanced features is a 24 hour digital clock. An alarm clock, no less, that you can programme to remind you to make that important international call. And should your long distance calls have a habit of getting out of hand, the Venue's built-in call timer lets you keep an eye on the seconds. (The call timer is particularly useful if you have business clients whom you charge for calls made on their behalf)

One of the most popular facilities on today's Inphones is a memory that stores your most frequently dialled numbers. As its name suggests, the Venue will store 24. So your favourite friends, shops and restaurants can all be reached at the press of a button or two.

If any of your friends are engaged—on the phone that is—Venue's last number redial button puts an end to that tiresome business of dialling the same number over and over. There's also a secrecy button that allows you to talk to other people in the room without the person at the end of the line—your bank manager, perhaps?—being able to hear you

You may feel that any number one has to obtain from directory enquiries is probably not worth ringing in the first place. But should this course of action be forced upon you, take advantage of the Venue's notepad memory. This clever little facility will store the number you're given, then automatically dial it for you at the touch of a button

All the numbers you dial, whether manually or from the memory, are displayed on the Venue's digital panel to ensure dialling accuracy.

INTONE.

Venue 24 is, of course, a telephone. But to call it such is to call champagne a drink. The Venue is not for those who are content with the bland, the pedestrian or the common (A higher than average price tag ensures it'll never become the latter) It is designed expressly for those who recognise that a successful blend of form and function produces style, and will look at home in environments that reflect that style.

Venue 24 is currently available in the two colours illustrated in this leaflet, white (with a pale grey keypad) or brown.

VENUE 24.

INPHONE.

Talk yourself into the Venue 24. You don't get just style—you get the product reliability you expect from British Telecom

Like all Inphones, Venue 24 is engineered to the highest standards and is fully tested and approved for connection to the British Telecom network.

It comes complete with a full 12 months guarantee, and four MN1500 batteries are included. Venue 24 is fitted with new style Inphone plugs which fit into special white sockets. British Telecom will install these virtually anywhere you want, quickly and at a reasonable cost.

You can order your Venue 24 direct from British Telecom. Just dial 100 during office hours and ask the operator for Freefone Telecom Sales.

VENUE 24.

Main features include

- Electronic press-button dialling.
- 24-number memory.
- Last number redial
- Call timer.
- 24-hour digital clock.
- Alarm feature.
- See-as-you-dial visual display.
- Notepad memory.
- Secrecy button.
- Adjustable tone caller.
- Available in brown or white/pale grey.

APPROVED for connection to telecommunication systems specified in the instructions for use subject to the conditions set out in them

S/1000/3/F500164

We do our best to supply our customers with the apparatus they ask for, but we may have to provide apparatus which does not accord exactly with the descriptions, illustrations and shades of colours shown in this leaflet.

Venue 24 and Inphone are Trade Marks of British Telecom.

British
TELECOM INPHONE™